Mamra Giri

Mamra Almonds, a type of superfood for the brain, is filled with innumerable health benefits. Loaded with omega fatty acids and completely non-existent of trans fat makes them a must in one's daily diet. Mamra almonds contain up to 50% oil whereas normal American almonds only contain 25-30% oil in it and more oil in the almond is the main storage unit of nutrition. Organically cultivated mamra almonds are a natural gift of nature to mankind for they stand out owing to the number of vitamins, minerals and oil they contain- making them most nutritious of all.

Walnuts

Walnuts are rich in alpha-linolenic acid, a plant-based omega-3 fatty acid. Walnuts also possess more polyphenolic compounds than any other nut. Both omega-3 fatty acids and polyphenols are essential foods for your brain. Studies link low levels of omega-3 to mood disorders and thus walnuts can help with mood stability and eliminate depression or anxiety. Walnuts contain potent antioxidants and vitamin E, which can make your skin look healthy and supple. In addition, vitamin E helps fight free radical damage caused due to oxidative stress. Free radicals damage your skin cells and lead to premature ageing and other skin issues. Thus, consuming walnuts may help improve your skin health. Walnut oil is a great remedy for dry and dull skin. It nourishes the skin from within and keeps it moisturised.

What is pure Saffron

Pure saffron is nothing but the aromatic orange-red stigma of the purple coloured flower of Crocus sativus - a fall flowering bulbous plant belonging to the iridaceae family. It is hand-picked and charcoal-fire-dried to make it crispy. Each saffron flower has 3 short, thread like red-coloured stigmas which remain red even after drying and provide a unique colour, aroma and flavour. The flowers also bear a longer, white - coloured style which turns pale yellow on drying and has no colour, aroma or flavour. The stigmas of around 1,50,000 flowers have to be handpicked, to produce 1 kilogram of pure saffron filaments - reason enough for its exorbitant price.
